

The Palestinian elections presented a choice between cooperation and confrontation. Hamas, the party against international cooperation, prevailed. As Hamas terrorist leaders seek to confront the International Community, they will attempt to govern the West Bank and Gaza without the international assistance that only comes from being effective partners in the peace process.